

Ask the recruiters:

Is moving to a fund right for me? What are my options and what is important to consider?

“There is a variety of roles and career paths available to you within a fund. As a finance professional, there is a high likelihood that your role will involve a degree of reporting regardless of where the role sits.

Key things to consider include the size of organisation you see yourself in, as well as the area of the fund you'd like to be and what your development/progression may look like.

If your long-term aim is to be a CFO in a fund, then it is important to develop understanding across both the corporate and fund sides of finance before embarking on building additional skills.

Working with investment teams can be high pressured and demanding. The level of support around you, especially earlier in your career, is also a key consideration. Having a strong mentor is priceless as is your ability to buy-in to your CFO/COO”.

Khuram Bajwa
Partner at
One Ten Associates

+44 20 3907 4225

www.onetenassociates.com/contact query@onetenassociates.com

oneten
associates

Ask the recruiters:

Is moving to a fund right for me? What are my options and what is important to consider?

Click on the links below to find out more:

“Can you describe what the career options are for an accountant in the fund space?”

“What advice would you give to an accountant torn between corporate and fund accounting roles?”

Khuram Bajwa: “What are the three main pathways for moving into a CFO or COO role for the first time?”

Mush Ali: “What are the three main pathways for moving into a CFO or COO role for the first time?”

One Ten Associates is a specialist recruitment firm servicing the needs of the private equity and hedge fund sectors.

As a candidate in a crowded and competitive marketplace it can be challenging to get noticed and stand out.

Career decisions and moving to a new job are serious considerations and you need to be confident that the consultant you are working with understands your skill set, your personal strengths, listens to your objectives and understands your career ambitions. Without this, they cannot effectively represent you with your career planning or job search.

Our firm has grown its reputation by having the unique blend of technical understanding and passion for the alternatives sector, but also an established candidate network across the private equity, hedge fund, asset management, real estate, infrastructure and service provider sectors.

Please do get in touch with the team at www.onetenassociates.com.

We are here to help.

